Lotto

(Lion Coffee game premium by Woolson Spice Company)

Copyright 1903

For either 2 or 4 players

May be played by from two to six persons. Cut the game apart at dotted lines, being careful not to cut anywhere else.

The cards and black squares are divided equally among the players; the red numbered squares are placed in a box or cup. Select a leader (a person not playing) to conduct the game. Each player lays his cards in front of him, face upward.

The leader begins the game by putting his hand in the box or cup, and drawing out a numbered piece. As he calls aloud the number of this, each player covers with a black square all of the spaces on his cards that have numbers corresponding to the one called by the leader.

Then the leader draws another number and the players do as before. The game continues in this manner until one of the players succeeds in covering all the numbers in two rows on any one of his cards, when he calls "Lotto," and wins the game.

Uncut game board.

The dotted lines create cards that are three rows high by six squares across on each row. Every row has one blank free square, so it would take five numbers to fill a row.

HELMET

FOR EITHER 2 OR 4 PLAYERS

Each player takes a corner or yard, and selecting a set of men, places these on the thirteen squares within the heavy black line in his corner. The object of the game is for each player to get his men in the yard diagonally opposite before his opponent does the same. In playing one can move a man one space in any direction—forwards, backwards, sideways or diagonally, or he can jump either his own men or his opponents in any direction. It must be understood that no men are to be removed from the board, and that moves and jumps can be made only to unoccupied spaces. Each player is entitled to only one move at a time—the players moving in turn, the one moving first being selected in any way desired.
