ABOUT THE GAME CATALOG

The Game Catalog attempts to list every indoor game manufactured in the United States through 1950.

Bill Alexander's first edition of the Game Catalog in 1989 included about 400 games. Bill produced several editions, through the 4th edition in 1993, at which point the game count had reached around 5700 games.

Anne Williams took over as editor from Bill several years ago, and compiled the 5th through 7th editions, all published in 1997, raising the game count to about 7400 games. Anne is also the AGCA Archivist, where copies of game rules, instructions, company catalogs, and other game materials are preserved.

Rick Tucker is now the editor of The Game Catalog, starting with the 8th edition.

The Game Catalog is an official publication of the American Game Collectors Association (AGCA)

WHAT'S NEW IN THE 8TH EDITION

The 8th Edition of The Game Catalog lists about 8300 games from about U.S. 1800 game publishers. More than 900 game listings have been added since the 7th edition in November 1997. In addition, about 1000 game listings have either been updated or had their dates reconfirmed based on new sources of information.

The compilers of The Game Catalog appreciate all of the additional information and updates provided by AGCA members and others since the 7th edition.

The 8th edition incorporates a large number of updates based on research performed at the U.S. Copyright Office.

A database is now being used to maintain all of the information contained within The Game Catalog. The printed version of The Game Catalog is generated from the database. Some types of information are stored in the database but are not included in the printed version. Using a database for The Game Catalog information will permit additional features to be supported in the future.

SUBMITTING UPDATES TO THE GAME CATALOG & GAME INSTRUCTIONS TO THE AGCA ARCHIVES

The task of cataloging games and collecting game instructions and other game information is an ongoing one that depends on continuing contributions from everyone in the game world.

The compilers welcome additions, updates, and corrections to The Game Catalog. Information is accepted in any format, but please see the input form at the front of The Game Catalog for the types of information that are most desirable.

In addition, photographs, scanned images, and photocopies of game covers, contents, rules, and company catalogs would be appreciated and will form a valuable addition to The Game Catalog and to the AGCA Archives.

HOW TO USE THE GAME CATALOG

The game listings are organized by company. Each listing gives known addresses for each company, followed by all known games by that manufacturer. Brand names and related companies are listed on the lines following the company name. The copyright, patent, or production date of a game is listed when known. If multiple editions of a game were published, only the first is listed unless the name of the game changed, different dates of publication are known, there are different catalog numbers, or the AGCA has rules for different editions.

Foreign companies and their games appear at the end of the listings, after the U.S. companies. Only foreign companies for which the AGCA Archives has instructions are listed in The Game Catalog.

Companies are listed in alphabetical order, based on the most important word in the company name. Milton Bradley Co., for example, appears in the B's. Alphabetization is word-by-word (like a telephone book) rather than letter-by-letter (like a dictionary). Thus, the "XYZ Game Manufacturing Co." comes before "XYZ Gameboard Co."

Hyphens and apostrophes are ignored, so O'Reilly comes after Oklahoma. If a company name consists entirely of initials, such as "A.M.L. & Co." or "S & J Mfg. Co.," it is alphabetized at the beginning of the section for the first initial (A for A.M.L. and S for S & J). Some company names, such as "National Games Co.," were very popular; it is wise to check nearby listings if a game can't be found in the expected place.

Manufacturer's catalog numbers for games, when known, are given after the game title (in parentheses). The same title may be listed with multiple catalog numbers. Also, in some cases the same title is listed with the same catalog number (e.g. with Milton Bradley), when distinctly different covers are known to exist in collections.

Other descriptive information associated with a game may also appear (within parentheses).

When a game's author is known, it is listed after the game [within brackets]. A game's patent owner, if known, is listed after the game in {braces}.

Important brand names are cross-indexed in the game listings. Users should also check the Name Index which lists game authors, inventors, designers, artists, endorsers and brands whose names differ from the name of the manufacturing company. There is also a Title Index which lists (alphabetically by title) all the games for which the AGCA can supply instructions.

Games appearing for the first time in the 8th edition are listed with a period (".") at the beginning of the line. Updates to games listed in previous editions are not specifically marked.

GAME INSTRUCTIONS AVAILABILITY

The Game Catalog also shows (with a ■ or □ in the left margin) the 1480 old games for which the American Game Collectors Association Archives has instructions. The ■ symbol by a game signifies that the AGCA Archives has instructions for the game and manufacturer, whereas the □ symbol indicates that the manufacturer is unknown. Since the Archives contain instructions for a few foreign games and post-1950 U.S. games, these games are also listed in the Catalog. A few post-1950 games may also be listed..

At the end of The Game Catalog is an index of all game titles (with associated manufacturers) for which the AGCA Archives has instructions.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

The compilers have used many sources of information for The Game Catalog, and acknowledge them gratefully. Special thanks are due to past and current AGCA archivists, Nancy Boyea, Erika Wilson, and Anne Williams, for their continued support. Important source books have been Warman's Antique American Games 1840 to 1940 by Lee Dennis; Games: American Boxed Games and Their Makers 1822-1992 by Bruce Whitehill; Baseball Games by Mark Cooper, and Antique Trader's Guide to Games & Puzzles by Harry Rinker.

Game company publications contain a wealth of information. The compilers have studied catalogs or brochures of: All-Fair (1928, 1930-32), Bliss (1896, 1911), Milton Bradley (1883-84, 1910, 1936-37, 1950), Chaffee & Selchow (1897), Child Welfare Publishers (ca 1935), Samuel Gabriel (1942-43), Magnus (ca 1862), McLoughlin Brothers (1886-87, 1895, 1909), Parker Brothers (1885 through 1899, 1912, 1920-21, 1941-42), Playtime House (1944, 1947), Smith Kline & French (1920), Warren (ca 1947), West & Lee (1875), Wilder (1921). Extensive examination of ads in old toy trade journals (Playthings, etc.) has uncovered many obscure games and companies.

Many individual AGCA members have contributed information based on their own collections and research. Joe Angiolillo, Bill & Betty Barnard, Sy Epstein, David Galt, Margery Griffith, Steve & Lea Horvath, Debby Krim, Bob LaFerriere, Alex Malloy, Jack Matthews, Pat McFarland, Bill Nutting, Elizabeth Overstad, Edward Ryan, Herb Siegel, John & Mildred Spear, Susan Stock and Dave Oglesby, Bill Trent, Lindy Van Fleet, Bruce Whitehill, and Blair Whitton have been specially helpful. Other sources include auction and sale catalogs, AGCA publications, and other articles.
